

New Media, Early Literacy & Libraries

Friday,
Sept.18 2015
9:00-4:00
WITC Rice Lake

Learn the whys and hows for including new media into your programs and services and find out how to evaluate apps and discover the ones that will be most useful for young children and families with Carissa Christner, Little e-Lit Contributor

Photo credit: Quite Adept (flickr)

Register by September 10 here: <http://tinyurl.com/kboyqnl>

This workshop is FREE and lunch is included

Over the past 15+ years, Carissa Christner has served in the youth services departments in small, medium and large libraries (much like Goldilocks, she feels that her current position at the Madison Public Library is “just right”). Carissa has written a chapter for the book How to STEM about her experiences creating a play-based STEM skills class for 3-4 year olds, and contributed to Young Children, New Media and Libraries, the e-book being published on the LittleeLit blog. She has been using apps in her library programming for about three years and blogs about those programs and others at LibraryMakers.blogspot.com.

This workshop made possible with a grant from

This workshop will supply 6 technology CEUs.

